

(TMI Newsletter - December 5, 2012)

THERE'S SOMETHING ABOUT JOE

"...one of the world's leading experts on remote viewing, Joe McMoneagle was psychic spy #001 for the U.S.'s Stargate Project that began at the Stanford Research Institute in the '70s. Joe was also a near-death experimenter and [is] author of several books..."

- Skeptico.com: Science at the Tipping Point

Joe McMoneagle is a very interesting man. It's fair to say he loves a mystery and in many respects he IS a mystery. Joe received commendations while serving in U.S. Army Intelligence that are so redacted as to be utterly incomprehensible.

His shift from regular spy to psychic spy is quite a tale; too long to recount here but the story can be read in the transcript of an interview Joe granted Skeptico.com last spring.

"Psychic Spy's Near-Death Experience Led to Remote Viewing."

(See the link to this article in the notes section below)

He ultimately discovered and honed a level of skill in remote viewing that has become legend in the RV community, leading to his establishing a thriving remote viewing consulting practice after retirement from the Army. Back when, Bob Monroe was instrumental in aiding Joe to move more swiftly into the state appropriate for optimal RV by constructing customized Hemi-Sync® frequency patterns for him.

Accounts of Joe's adventures in consciousness may also be found in his books, four in total: Mind Trek, Memoirs of a Psychic Spy, The Ultimate Time Machine, and Remote Viewing Secrets: A Handbook.

